

Story Collector

Pre-K through Grade 5, written to Grade 2 standards

Everyone is a storyteller. At the Skirball, we use storytelling to make connections across cultures, build strong communities, and carry on traditions from one generation to the next. In this lesson, students will connect with loved ones and role models, learn from the experiences of others, and become recorders of their own family and community histories.

Objective

Students will build listening and writing skills by interviewing family or community members and reflecting on the stories shared.

Materials (Worksheets available on Google Slides)

- “Story Collector” worksheets

Class Activity

1. Facilitate a class discussion about the value of passing down stories from generation to generation.
2. Ask students to think of someone in their family or community they would like to learn from.

Student Instructions

Use the “Story Collector” worksheets to prepare for, conduct, and record your own interviews.

Share Out

Ask students to present their findings in a storytelling circle.

- What common themes did students find?
- What were they surprised to discover?
- What was their favorite part of this process?

Visual Arts Activity

Invite students to visually represent what they have learned in their interviews through a drawing, collage, or found object (e.g., a family photo or other artifact).

Curriculum Connections

CCSS.ELA-LITERACY: W.2.8, SL.2.2

Resources

StoryCorps: An organization that preserves and shares humanity's stories in order to build connections between people and create a more just and compassionate world. Check out their remote interview platform StoryCorps Connect.

Lowell Milken Center for Unsung Heroes: A project-based initiative that encourages students to discover, develop, and communicate the stories of Unsung Heroes who have made a profound and positive impact on the course of history.

Teaching Tolerance—Exploring Identity through Storytelling/Personal Narratives: A collection of stories and discussion questions focused on fostering identity and community.

Story Collector

Everyone is a storyteller. Stories are a powerful way to make connections, build community, and carry on traditions from one generation to the next. Preserve the stories of someone important to you by talking with them about their life, writing down what they say, and sharing their stories with others.

Choose three of the interview questions below or write your own. Use your selected questions to interview a member of your family or community. Then, write a journal entry for each story you discover using the “Story Collector: Journal Reflection” worksheet.

Interview Questions

- Talk about one of your favorite family traditions.
- What is a food that is special to your family or community and why?
- Share a memory of a journey or family trip.
- Tell me about your favorite childhood game or pastime.
- Share a memory of a great-grandparent or ancestor.
- Talk about a time your family or community worked together to solve a problem.
- What do you appreciate about your family and/or your community?
- Share a memory of a time you were brave.
- Tell me about a time you taught something to another person.
- What is an object that is important to you and why?
- Tell me about an adventure you had when you were younger.
- Talk about a time you felt welcome in a new place.

Add your own questions below.

Story Collector: Journal Reflection

For us storytellers, it's important to look back on the stories we write and the stories we collect from others. Reflection helps us better understand our emotions, strengths, and areas for growth. In the end, we become better storytellers by making reflection a part of our learning process.

Think back to each interview and answer the questions below.

1. Who shared their story with you?

2. What was the story about?

3. How did the story make you feel?

4. What did the story make you wonder?
